

Privacy and confidentiality are as important for us as they are for you.

In keeping with its approach to modern business conduct, PALET complies with the following essential principles in order to protect the privacy of any information that you may provide to the PALET website (hereinafter referred to as “the website” or “our website”):

Necessary precautions have been taken to maintain the highest possible level of server systems and internet infrastructure security as these apply to the confidentiality of the information submitted to the website. None of the transactions or update information submitted by users to the website can be displayed by other internet users. This information will not be used for communicating with our users by e-mail or other means. Unauthorized access to information that our users give to us is restricted to everyone, including but not limited to PALET personnel.

PALET will not divulge such information to any other individual, agency, or organization without the particular user’s consent or unless it is required by law to do so.

PALET may not divulge such information in any way whatsoever except within the framework of specified authorizations and the requirements of law. If any regulatory, lawmaking, or enforcement agency or authority to which PALET is responsible requires such information to be divulged, PALET will do so only within the framework of authorized requirements.

In addition to its own internal links, our website may contain links to other websites. Our Privacy Policy and the promises that it makes apply only to our own website and in no way extend to any other website. If you transfer to another website from our website by means of a link, the privacy and security terms and conditions of that other website will apply and not those of our website. PALET cannot be held in any way responsible for any material or moral losses or damages that may be sustained due to the use of information, ethical principles, confidentiality principles, or the quality or nature of service of any other website that you may visit because of any advertisement, banner, content, or other reason contained on our website.

PALET may obtain support services from outside organizations with which it works. In such cases, PALET will ensure that such organizations comply with PALET's own privacy standards and conditions.

With the exception of such information and materials as are clearly indicated as belonging to other parties, all of the information and materials contained on our website and the rights applicable to them and to their arrangements are the sole property of PALET. These rights include, but are not limited to, copyrights, trademarks, patents, intellectual property, and all other rights of ownership, all of which are retained by PALET.

Necessary precautions have been taken to maintain the highest possible level of system and internet infrastructure security as these apply to the confidentiality of our users personal information. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you need any additional information regarding the matters discussed here.

*This page was last updated on 15 November 2011